

DEVI GUPTA

Entrepreneurship Student

Babson College · Dean's List · EPS 1210 Personal Highlights

I believe the best way to earn responsibility is to first earn credibility.

EXPERIENCE

■ BSBK Pvt. Ltd.

India

Growing up around the family business gave me early exposure to long-term thinking, operational discipline and the weight of reputation. Businesses like ours are built over decades, through consistency and trust.

■ Varun Beverages (PepsiCo)

Zambia

I worked as an intern inside a large international beverage operation, seeing how commercial strategy translates into day-to-day execution, and what operational excellence and accountability actually look like on the ground.

■ Entrepreneurial Families

Babson College

Served as an internal business consultant to my family's business: questioning assumptions, evaluating operations and recommending where future value can be created.

EXECUTION

I led an initiative, alongside a student team, to move Charterhouse's school shop to a zero-plastic, waste-conscious model: coordinating stakeholders, challenging existing practice and turning an ambitious goal into implementation. Meaningful change rarely comes from good ideas alone. It comes from consistent execution.

PROFESSIONAL PRINCIPLES

Earn responsibility before expecting authority.
Listen to understand before trying to persuade.
Judge success by the impact, not the visibility of the credit.

THE TEAM I THRIVE IN

People who communicate honestly, respect commitments, challenge ideas respectfully, stay curious and take ownership without needing to be reminded. I'll always take an honest rough draft over a polished promise.

WHY DRAFT ME

I won't always be the loudest person in the room. But I'll notice the problem everyone else has accepted, ask thoughtful questions before offering solutions, and create structure when things become unclear. I take ownership of the outcome, not just my task. And I care about leaving the work, the team and the people stronger than I found them. That's the standard I grew up with. It's the one I'll bring to your team.

WHO I AM

I'm an entrepreneurship student at Babson preparing for a career in a multigenerational family enterprise. Growing up around business taught me that long-term success is built on trust, discipline and execution rather than quick wins. I'm not preparing to inherit responsibility. I'm focused on earning it.

HOW I LEAD

Leadership taught me that listening is the most underrated professional skill. People often tell you the solution they want; if you listen carefully enough, they reveal the problem they actually need solved. As Head of the International Pupil Action Committee at Charterhouse, I represented students living far from home, took their concerns to the school, and mentored younger pupils — and learned that trust is built long before decisions are made.

RELY ON ME FOR

- Listening carefully before advising
- Seeing problems others overlook
- Practical plans that move work forward
- Bringing people together around a goal
- Persuading with logic, not pressure

PROFESSIONAL STRENGTHS

- Ownership - outcomes, not just tasks.
- Problem solving - hard questions, practical answers.
- Listening - understand first, advise second.
- Cross-cultural fluency - Four countries, one authentic style.

WORKING ON

I don't always voice my concerns as early as I should. When something feels off, I can sit on it too long before raising it or asking for help, and small problems get bigger than they needed to be. I'm working on speaking up early, even when it's uncomfortable.
