

Class CEO — The Ultimate Challenge

Senior, Babson College '26

Entrepreneurship & Strategy

■ CONTACT

New Delhi, India

Boston, MA

nandikajain5@gmail.com

linkedin.com/in/nandika-jain-17432a1b2

■ THE HIGHLIGHTS

- First Class Honours, LSE
- Dean's List & Platinum Pin
- EcoKeeper - profitable; B2B sale to Babson
- Member of TEDxBabson, Consultant at the Undergrad Consulting Program
- 3x HBS Family Business Conference · 2x Harvard India Conference
- Red Cross volunteer
- Proficient in Excel, Powerpoint, and Artificial Intelligence tools

■ MY OPERATING SYSTEM

- Read the room, then lead
- Calculated risks, never reckless
- Ready to improvise
- Win as a team
- Negotiate hard, listen harder
- Comfortable with uncertainty
- Own it, don't wait to be told

■ THE REST OF ME

- 25+ countries, always counting
- Memorized the first 51 digits of pi
- Dreaming of getting a private pilot's license
- Always reading how companies get built

NANDIKA JAIN

Entrepreneurial Innovator, Natural Negotiator, Persistent Problem Solver.

I'm the kind of person who can't walk past a business without wondering how it actually works - how it makes money, why its customers stay, what would break it. That curiosity has taken me through a lot of different seats: audit, corporate finance, distressed assets, consulting, and a startup of my own. I grew up inside a family business that spans chemicals, metals, textiles, and electric vehicles, so noticing how companies run has always felt natural to me. Dinner-table conversation was margins and machinery long before I realized that it was unusual. I've come to believe you read a business more honestly the more angles you see it from, and I'm still exploring.

■ ON MY DESK RIGHT NOW

At KhetiBuddy, powered by Verdnt, I'm helping build a B2B SaaS ERP and creating the autonomous marketing engine for organic farming - one that runs almost the entire marketing process with minimal human involvement. It's technical, commercial, and creative at once, and I like that far more than one clean, predictable problem.

■ LESSONS THAT SHAPED ME

EcoKeeper Co-Founder · Babson FME

I co-founded a sustainable consumer brand and took it from an idea to real profit in one academic year, including a B2B sale to Babson Admissions. Halfway through, our pricing model fell apart and we rebuilt the whole go-to-market with the clock running. The lesson stuck: execution beats theory, and being wrong early is fine as long as you own it fast and fix it.

Coforge Finance · United States

I ran budgeting and forecasting on $10M+ technology programs and built the dashboards the VP of Finance actually used to make calls. Sitting in an American corporate seat right after EY in India showed me how much the same problem changes shape depending on which market you're standing in - an idea that now runs through everything I do cross-border.

Ernst & Young Audit & Advisory · India

I audited financial statements, found gaps in internal controls, and turned messy numbers into recommendations that had to hold up when a client pushed back. I came out of it knowing how to be right when someone is checking your work, and how to hold a room when the stakes are real.

■ WHO I WANT AT MY TABLE

The best teams I've been on run on trust more than talent. I want honest, accountable people who are genuinely exciting to work with - the kind who argue with me before a decision, then commit to it fully once it's made, and who would rather win together than be right alone. If you're on my team, you get real ownership and I'll hold you to it. Let's aim for the best grade in the room, and get sharper earning it.